MID CENTRAL COMMUNITY ACTION

Annual gala off to the races

BLOOMINGTON — Mid Central Community Action, a local non-profit organization, is hosting its 6th annual Seeds of Change Gala on Friday, May 6, at 6 p.m., at the Marriott in Uptown Normal. Tickets are $60.

Community members are invited to break out the hats, dress to impress, and celebrate with MCCA during a Kentucky Derby-inspired evening benefitting MCCA's mission and programs. Guests will enjoy a reception featuring mint juleps, silent auction items, and fellowship. The call to the post will invite guests to enjoy dinner and see the impact of their support firsthand.

"The gala committee wanted a fun, engaging theme for our sixth year and with the Kentucky Derby scheduled for the following day, we thought it was a great way to kick off the weekend," said Kristen Sand, director of resource development. "The opportunity to get dressed up, wear a great hat or bow tie and enjoy an evening out; while supporting a great cause is really what the committee has worked hard to create."

MCCA's mission is to educate, equip and empower individuals and families toward financially secure, violence free lives. Proceeds from the gala directly benefit MCCA's programs and impact local families in McLean and Livingston Counties. The gala supports MCCA's Countering Domestic Violence Program and Neville House Emergency Shelter; the Next Step Financial Coaching Program, Mayors Manor Permanent Supportive Housing and community engagement efforts.

The gala will feature success stories from several MCCA program participants. "MCCA is a critical asset in our community," said Walter Lindberg, board vice president. "Sometimes our neighbors face obstacles they cannot overcome on their own. MCCA provides ways our community can lend its collective strength to people in need."

Registration for the May event is open through Friday, April 29.

To learn more about the event or to register, visit www.mccainc.org or call 309-843-9254.
